MELODIES OF ENGLISH VERSE

SELECTIONS FOR MEMORIZING CHOSEN AND ARRANGED

BY

LEWIS KENNEDY MORSE

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;
Not to the sensual ear, but, more endear'd,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone.

IN PRAISE OF RHYTHM

SONG is no bauble —
Slight not the songsmith,
England my mother,
    Maker of men.

Lo, with the ancient Roots of man's nature,
Twines the eternal
    Passion of song.

Deep in the world-heart
Stand its foundations,
Tangled with all things,
    Twin-made with all.

Nay, what is Nature's Self, but an endless
Strife toward music,
    Euphony, rhyme?

Trees in their blooming,
Tides in their flowing,
Stars in their circling,
    Tremble with song.

God on His throne is Eldest of poets:
Unto His measures

THE TRAINING OF THE EAR

THE habit of learning poetry by heart is one of the most valuable that a school can give. The memory can be trained to hold what is wanted, be it facts till an examination, or beauty till old age. Memory in a remarkable way shapes life to what it holds. Especially in early childhood, when impressions are persistent and strong, poetry once learned becomes a large factor in education. It works by an agency all its own and grows with the growth of him who has learned it. Verses carried in the mind create capacity, and in no other way can the young so quickly acquire refinement of feeling, increase of intellectual power, and sure provision for future enjoyment. Reading does not bring about these results in anything like the same degree. Its impressions are too fleeting. We need to be long in the company of beauty, to hold it indeed within us, in order to be vitalized by it into creatures of nobler mould. In learning lines by heart, the child goes behind the printed page, identifies himself with the author, and, sharing his ideas, recreates the poet's emotions. Because committing to memory is difficult, it is the more valuable, as causing words to be dwelt upon and canvassed, new ones grasped and explored. How instructive lapses of memory become! Trying to recall a line, the child puts in a poorer word, perceives it to be poorer, and so has the significance of the original freshly revealed. As if he were himself a creator, he sees why the words must have fallen just so and in no other way. By such means, too, speech acquires ease, range, and precision.

Methods of learning by heart are as various as the learners. For some the chief thing will be the physical mouthing of the words, as in a refrain ; with others the eye helps most by picturing the printed page ; while for the rest the melody or the jingle, as carried by the ear, keeps the lines true. All these temperamental differences are valuable, and it may be well to let the order in which the poems are learned turn on individual pleasure. The order in which they are here printed indicates nothing as to the best order for committing to memory. Indeed, age and liking may frequently require the teacher to choose only a part of a selection. But whatever one's age may be, the ability to repeat verse from memory is a necessary stage in the growth of appreciation. If the book is begun at seven, by the time one is eighteen he might possess almost the whole collection, to go with him as an inheritance of worth into every year of his life.

Already there exist many admirable collections of verse for children, and some of these will, it is hoped, be used to supplement this little book. But none has precisely its aim. There are two contrasted aspects in all verse : thought with its attendant emotion, and ordered sound through which thought and emotion are given expression. The sensuous and technical form appeals to the ear, the matter or contents — consisting of scenes, events, and thoughts — to the intellect. Of these two contrasted, yet ever allied, aspects of poetry, it might seem that the intellectual and visual would be the proper one to put forward for children, and other collections have generally been guided by this view. But it is the technical side which is made prominent here, and, strangely enough, this is the order of nature. In nursery rhymes, the earliest poetry to be learned by heart, there is nothing rational. All is melody. As there is an ear for music, there is as truly an ear for rhythm, and the love of Mother Goose shows how rhythm and rhyme rule the early years, and how strongly music and metrical utterance are desired. Those fondly loved cadences reveal intellectual elements but slightly. It is the ear which they subtly and accurately train. But too often, after the period of nursery jingles, there is an abrupt leap into the poetry of thought and feeling. Instead, the beginner should be carried on into rhythms and rhymes of greater subtlety ; and this book may be his guide during this second formative period. It seeks to restore nature to her rights. What is true of music is true of poetry : response to music is to be had in high degree only by a disciplined ear. So, too, some preliminary training in the distinctive melodies of verse will ease the approach to its ideas and emotions. Rhythmic sound is ever the instinctive expression of emotion. Instead then of concentrating attention on the intricacies of thought and feeling which verse embodies, this book appeals primarily to the ear, and by stimulating growth in instinctive sensuous apprehension, prepares for more readily seizing what is intellectual and passionate in poetry.

The teacher, however, may wish for a few suggestions in regard to poetic technicalities, in order that, being himself completely conscious, he may the better keep the pupil in unconsciousness. That will be the best condition for a considerable time. If the ear is suitably trained, comprehension of metrical structure may wisely be deferred to more reflective years.

Poetry, like music and the arts, is based on the repetition of similar parts. In poetry this repetition in its most elementary form appears in the foot. The foot is the basal unit. It is a definitely planned group of sounds, and on its technical side is hard and rigid. The kinds most frequently used are four. In the iambus the contrasted sounds are an unaccented followed by an accented, represented here by '+'. In the trochee this contrast is reversed, and appears as "'+'. The anapaest prefixes another unaccented sound to the iambus which becomes '++', while the dactyl adds an unaccented syllable to the trochee, and results in '++'. The foot repeated again and again makes the line. For marking out this new unit of the line, and to relate it to another similar unit, rhyme is used. Rhyme emphasizes the line and coördinates it with other lines. Where the metrical scheme runs on through several lines, the group constitutes a stanza or third form of unity. Out of repeated stanzas a poem may be fashioned. It will therefore be seen that from first to last some kind of repetition has bound together the whole poetic structure. But rhyme and stanza must not be supposed to be essential for verse. They may be used or not according to the intended purpose. Emotion dictates structure. Where continuity of feeling is the chief thing, rhyme, and still more the stanza, may easily interfere. In such case the verse is left blank. On the contrary, when feeling is complex, a complicated system of rhyme may be used, as in the extreme instance of the Spenserian stanza, to detach its parts while at the same time knitting them into an elaborate whole. The simplest forms of rhyming structure are the couplet, the triplet, and the quatrain or four-lined stanza with its various rhyming systems. Because so simple, these schemes lend themselves to a wide variety of uses. In so strongly emphasizing, however, the systematic character of verse, there is danger of suggesting mechanical accuracy. Nothing of the kind will be found in true poetry. Hoping to aid the teacher in tracing plans of metrical structure, a detailed scansion of parts of eight poems is here printed, five representing metres tolerably regular and three markedly irregular. The suggestions of these diagrams are, however, only tentative. A mechanical scheme must not be slavishly followed. The fall of the accent is largely regulated by feeling, and is therefore frequently debatable.

Since the chief gain of committing to memory comes through the necessity we are under to examine beauty closely and long, passages have been chosen which can bear this intimate and testing experience as well as the wear and tear of frequent oral repetition. The volume contains one hundred and six short selections, making a total body of less than eighteen hundred lines. Forty-nine poets are represented. The length of each selection, averaging about sixteen lines, is fixed with a view, not only to avoid taxing the mind, but also to persuade children to delight in repetition and teachers to encourage it. Because of this necessary brevity, and for the sake of clearness and unity, an occasional change of the original text has been made. The indentation of lines is generally determined by the rhymes and enables the eye to help the ear to understand. For each selection the centre of interest is pointed out by a title, the year of the writer's birth and of his death are given, and also his own title for the whole poem from which a part has been taken ; while, just as on the musical page, the name of the prevailing foot is indicated and the number of beats in the line. Except for the last six poems which concern the subject-matter of poetry, dividing it into six parts under the general title, Poems of Reverence, the whole collection falls into four sections according to the kind of foot which prevails in each ; and within the section the order follows the number of feet in the line. Within this sequence, the arrangement is chronological only when the metrical scheme of the selections is identical as to rhyme and accent ; otherwise, beginning with verses without rhymes, the order is determined by the number of lines or rhymes in the stanza. In the group of sonnets technical considerations of structure and rhyme have dictated the order.

There is an analytical index of metres, showing diversity in rhyming schemes and grouping together similar kinds of verse. For the teacher this will be of special use, the more consciously to find for the learner's ear variety and contrast in the sequence of choices for committing to memory. For the teacher and pupil alike the authors' index and an index of first lines will be found useful.

Let it not be thought that the greatest poetry is unfit for common children, or that the worth of learning by heart is limited to the young. Poetry commands a response from ears of every age and station. The profounder its passion, and the richer its rhythm, the deeper is the awakening of the human soul. In the faith that deep can thus call unto deep, this book is gathered. It is made especially to help children and their teachers to reach a larger reverence for the great poets, and through melodies that are immortal, to acquire beauty in their speech, and in their lives a lasting joy.

THE BRAVE HEART

Undone
By my losses,
Comply
Will I
With my crosses.
Yet still
I will
Not be grieving;
Since thence
And hence
Comes relieving.
But this Sweet is
In our mourning;
Times bad
And sad
Are a turning;
And he Whom we See dejected,
Next day
We may See erected.

EARLY SPRING

ONCE more the Heavenly Power
    Makes all things new,
And domes the red-plow'd hills
    With loving blue;
The blackbirds have their wills,
    The throstles too.

Opens a door in heaven;
    From skies of glass
A Jacob's ladder falls
    On greening grass,
And o'er the mountain-walls
    Young angels pass.

Before them fleets the shower,
    And burst the buds,
And shine the level lands,
    And flash the floods;
The stars are from their hands
    Flung thro' the woods,

The woods with living airs
How softly fann'd,
Light airs from where the deep,
All down the sand,
Is breathing in his sleep,
Heard by the land.

O, follow, leaping blood,
The season's lure!
O heart, look down and up
Serene, secure,
Warm as the crocus cup,
Like snowdrops, pure!

For now the Heavenly Power
Makes all things new,
And thaws the cold, and fills
The flower with dew;
The blackbirds have their wills,
The poets too.

SPRING SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

THE cock is crowing,
The stream is flowing,
The small birds twitter,
The lake doth glitter,
The green field sleeps in the sun;
The oldest and youngest
Are at work with the strongest;
The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising;
There are forty feeding like one!

GUIDING SAINTS

STARS are of mighty use: the night
Is dark, and long;
The road foul; and where one goes right,
Six may go wrong.
One twinkling ray,
Shot o'er some cloud,
May clear much way,
And guide a crowd.

God's saints are shining lights: who stays
Here long must pass
O'er dark hills, swift streams, and steep ways
As smooth as glass;
But these all night,
Like candles, shed
Their beams, and light
Us into bed.

MELODIES

They are, indeed, our pillar-fires,
    Seen as we go;
They are that City's shining spires
    We travel to.
A swordlike gleam
    Kept man from sin,
First out; this beam
    Will guide him in.

SOLITUDE

HAPPY the man whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire;
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter fire.

Blest, who can unconcern'dly find
Hours, days, and years, slide soft away
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day,

Sound sleep by night; study and ease,
Together mixt, sweet recreation,
And innocence, which most does please
With meditation.

MELODIES

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown;
    Thus unlamented let me die;
Steal from the world, and not a stone
    Tell where I lie.

TO A MOUSE

WEE, sleekit,<sup>1</sup> cow'rin', tim'rous beastie,
O, what a panic 's in thy breastie!
Thou need na start awa sae hasty
Wi' bickering<sup>2</sup> brattle!<sup>3</sup>
I wad be laith<sup>4</sup> to rin an' chase thee,
Wi' murd'ring pattle!<sup>5</sup>

Thou saw the fields laid bare an' waste,
An' weary winter comin' fast,
An' cozie here, beneath the blast,
Thou thought to dwell,
Till, crash! the cruel coulter past
Out thro' thy cell.

But Mousie, thou art no thy<sup>6</sup> lane,<sup>6</sup>
In proving foresight may be vain:
The best-laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang oft agley,<sup>7</sup>
An' lea'e us nought but grief an' pain,
For promised joy!

Still thou art blest, compared wi' me!
The present only toucheth thee:
But och! I backward cast my e'e,<sup>8</sup>
    On prospects drear!
An' forward, tho' I canna see,
    I guess an' fear!

CROSSING THE BAR

SUNSET and evening star,
    And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
    When I put out to sea,

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
    Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
    Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
    And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
    When I embark;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
    The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
    When I have crost the bar.

THE RAINBOW

My heart leaps up when I behold
    A rainbow in the sky:
So was it when my life began;
    So is it now I am a man;
So be it when I shall grow old,
    Or let me die!

The Child is father of the Man;
And I could wish my days to be Bound each to each by natural piety.

COMRADES

LIFE! I know not what thou art,
But know that thou and I must part;
And when, or how, or where we met,
I own to me 's a secret yet.

Life! we have been long together
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'T is hard to part when friends are dear;
Perhaps 't will cost a sigh, a tear;—

Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not Good-night, but in some brighter clime
Bid me Good-morning!

MAN GOES, FLOWERS RETURN

WHENCE is it, that the floweret of the field doth fade,
And lieth buried long in Winter's bale;
Yet, soon as Spring his mantle hath display'd,
It flowereth fresh, as it should never fail?
But thing on earth that is of most avail,
As virtues branch and beauties bud,
Reliven not for any good.
O heavy hearse!

The branch once dead, the bud eke needs must quail;
O careful verse!

THE ELIXIR

TEACH me, my God and King,
    In all things thee to see;
And what I do in any thing,
    To do it as for thee.

Not rudely, as a beast,
    To run into an action;
But still to make thee prepossest,
    And give it his perfection.

A man that looks on glass
    On it may stay his eye,
Or if he pleaseth, through it pass,
    And then the heav'n espy.

All may of thee partake:
    Nothing can be so mean,
Which with his tincture (for thy sake)
    Will not grow bright and clean.

A servant with this clause
    Makes drudgery divine:
Who sweeps a room, as for thy laws,
    Makes that and th' action fine.

This is the famous stone
    That turneth all to gold:
For that which God doth touch and own
    Cannot for less be told.

THE BROOK

I COME from haunts of coot and hern,
    I make a sudden sally,
And sparkle out among the fern,
    To bicker down a valley.

I wind about, and in and out,
    With here a blossom sailing,
And here and there a lusty trout,
    And here and there a grayling,

And here and there a foamy flake
    Upon me, as I travel,
With many a silvery water-break
    Above the golden gravel,

And draw them all along, and flow
    To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
    But I go on forever.

I steal by lawns and grassy plots,
I slide by hazel covers;
I move the sweet forget-me-nots
That grow for happy lovers.

I slip, I slide, I gloom, I glance,
Among my skimming swallows;
I make the netted sunbeam dance
Against my sandy shallows.

I murmur under moon and stars
In brambly wildernesses;
I linger by my shingly bars;
I loiter round my cresses;

And out again I curve and flow
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever.

THE CHILDREN OF GOD

O WEDDING-GUEST! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide wide sea:
So lonely 't was, that God himself
Scarce seemed there to be.

O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'T is sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company! —

To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends,
And youths and maidens gay!

Farewell, farewell! but this I tell
To thee, thou Wedding-Guest!
He prayeth well, who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast.

He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

THE ANGEL CHOIR

AROUND, around, flew each sweet sound,
Then darted to the Sun;
Slowly the sounds came back again,
Now mixed, now one by one.

Sometimes a-dropping from the sky
I heard the sky-lark sing;
Sometimes all little birds that are,
How they seem'd to fill the sea and air
With their sweet jargoning!

And now 't was like all instruments,
Now like a lonely flute;
And now it is an angel's song,
That makes the heavens be mute.

It ceased; yet still the sails made on
A pleasant noise till noon,
A noise like of a hidden brook
In the leafy month of June,
That to the sleeping woods all night
Singeth a quiet tune.

THE EDUCATION OF NATURE

THREE years she grew in sun and shower,
Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower
    On earth was never sown;
This Child I to myself will take;
She shall be mine, and I will make
    A Lady of my own.

"The floating clouds their state shall lend
To her; for her the willow bend;
    Nor shall she fail to see
Even in the motions of the Storm
Grace that shall mould the Maiden's form
    By silent sympathy.

"The stars of midnight shall be dear
To her; and she shall lean her ear
    In many a secret place
Where rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound
    Shall pass into her face."

PAST AND PRESENT

I REMEMBER, I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
    Came peeping in at morn;
He never came a wink too soon
    Nor brought too long a day;
But now, I often wish the night
    Had borne my breath away.

I remember, I remember
Where I was used to swing,
And thought the air must rush as fresh
    To swallows on the wing;
My spirit flew in feathers then
    That is so heavy now,
And summer pools could hardly cool
    The fever on my brow.

I remember, I remember
The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 't is little joy
To know I'm farther off from Heaven
Than when I was a boy.

IT is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make Man better be;
Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last dry, bald, and sere:
    A lily of a day
    Is fairer far in May,
Although it fall and die that night—
It was the plant and flower of Light.

THE OCEAN AND ITS MELODY

THE sea is calm to-night.

The tide is full; the moon lies fair
Upon the straits; — on the French coast the light
Gleams, and is gone; the cliffs of England stand,
Glimmering and vast, out in the tranquil bay,
Only, from the long line of spray
Where the sea meets the moon-blanch'd land,

Listen! you hear the grating roar
Of pebbles which the waves draw back, and fling,
At their return, up the high strand,
Begin, and cease, and then again begin,
With tremulous cadence slow, and bring
The eternal note of sadness in.

Now air is hush'd, save where the weak-eyed bat
With short shrill shriek flits by on leathern wing;

Or where the beetle winds
His small but sullen horn,

As oft he rises midst the twilight path,
Against the pilgrim borne in heedless hum :

Now teach me, maid composed,
To breathe some soften'd strain.

While Spring shall pour his showers, as oft he wont,
And bathe thy breathing tresses, meekest eve!

While Summer loves to sport
Beneath thy lingering light;

While sallow Autumn fills thy lap with leaves;
Or Winter, yelling through the troublous air,

Affrights thy shrinking train
And rudely rends thy robes;

So long, regardful of thy quiet rule,
Shall Fancy, Friendship, Science, smiling Peace,
Thy gentlest influence own,
And love thy favourite name!

SHUT in from all the world without,
We sat the clean-wing'd hearth about,
Content to let the north-wind roar
In baffled rage at pane and door,
While the red logs before us beat
The frost-line back with tropic heat;
And ever, when a louder blast
Shook beam and rafter as it pass'd,
The merrier up its roaring draught
The great throat of the chimney laugh'd;
What matter how the night behaved ?
What matter how the north-wind raved ?
Blow high, blow low, not all its snow

BROODING GRIEF

THE wind flapp'd loose, the wind was still,
Shaken out dead from tree and hill:
I had walk'd on at the wind's will,—
I sat now, for the wind was still.

Between my knees my forehead was,—
My lips, drawn in, said not Alas!
My hair was over in the grass,
My naked ears heard the day pass.

My eyes, wide open, had the run
Of some ten weeds to fix upon;
Among those few, out of the sun,
The woodspurge flower'd, three cups in one.

From perfect grief there need not be
Wisdom or even memory:
One thing then learnt remains to me,—
The woodspurge has a cup of three.

To-NIGHT the winds begin to rise
And roar from yonder dropping day;
The last red leaf is whirl'd away,
The rooks are blown about the skies;

The forest crack'd, the waters curl'd,
The cattle huddled on the lea;
And wildly dash'd on tower and tree
The sunbeam strikes along the world.

We paused: the winds were in the beech;
We heard them sweep the winter land;
And in a circle hand-in-hand
Sat silent, looking each at each.

THE BALLAD OF ROSABELLE

MOOR, moor the barge, ye gallant crew!
And, gentle lady, deign to stay!
Rest thee in Castle Ravensheuch,
Nor tempt the stormy firth to-day.

Last night the gifted Seer did view
A wet shroud swath'd round lady gay;
Then stay thee, Fair, in Ravensheuch;
Why cross the gloomy firth to-day?

“ ‘T is not because Lord Lindesay’s heir
To-night at Roslin leads the ball,
But that my lady-mother there
Sits lonely in her castle-hall.

“ ‘T is not because the ring they ride,
And Lindesay at the ring rides well,
But that my sire the cup will chide
If ’t is not fill’d by Rosabelle.”

Light glared on Roslin's castled rock,
It ruddied all the copse-wood glen;
'T was seen from Dryden's groves of oak,
And seen from cavern'd Hawthornden.

Blazed battlement and pinnet high,
Blazed every rose-carved buttress fair —
So still they blaze, when fate is nigh
The lordly line of high Saint Clair.

There are twenty of Roslin's barons bold —
Lie buried within that proud chapelle;
Each one the holy vault doth hold —
But the sea holds lovely Rosabelle.

And each Saint Clair was buried there,
With candle, with book, and with knell ;
But the sea-caves rung, and the wild winds sung
The dirge of lovely Rosabelle.

COMPARISONS

You meaner beauties of the night,
That poorly satisfy our eyes
More by your number than your light,
You common people of the skies,
What are you, when the moon shall rise?

You curious chanters of the wood
That warble forth dame Nature's lays,
Thinking your passions understood
By your weak accents; what's your praise
When Philomel her voice doth raise?

You violets that first appear,
By your pure purple mantles known
Like the proud virgins of the year,
As if the spring were all your own,—
What are you, when the Rose is blown?

THE HARD MAN

HE roved among the vales and streams,
    In the green wood and hollow dell;
They were his dwellings night and day, —
    But Nature ne'er could find the way
        Into the heart of Peter Bell.

In vain, through every changeful year,
    Did Nature lead him as before;
A primrose by a river's brim
    A yellow primrose was to him,
        And it was nothing more.

At noon, when, by the forest's edge
    He lay beneath the branches high,
The soft blue sky did never melt
    Into his heart; he never felt
        The witchery of the soft blue sky!

A savage wildness round him hung
    As of a dweller out of doors;
In his whole figure and his mien
    A savage character was seen
        Of mountains and of dreary moors.

There was a hardness in his cheek,
    There was a hardness in his eye,
As if the man had fix'd his face
In many a solitary place,
    Against the wind and open sky!

EACH AND ALL

LITTLE thinks, in the field, yon red-cloak'd clown
 Of thee from the hill-top looking down;
 The heifer that lows in the upland farm,
 Far-heard, lows not thine ear to charm;
 The sexton, tolling his bell at noon,
 Deems not that great Napoleon
 Stops his horse, and lists with delight,
 Whilst his files sweep round yon Alpine height;
 Nor knowest thou what argument
 Thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent.
 All are needed by each one;
 Nothing is fair or good alone.

I thought the sparrow's note from heaven,
 Singing at dawn on the alder bough;
 I brought him home, in his nest, at even;
 He sings the song, but it cheers not now,
 For I did not bring home the river and sky;—
 He sang to my ear, — they sang to my eye.

THE REVELATION

An idle poet, here and there,
    Looks round him; but, for all the rest,
The world, unfathomably fair,
    Is duller than a witling's jest.
Love wakes men, once a lifetime each;
    They lift their heavy lids, and look;
And, lo, what one sweet page can teach,
    They read with joy, then shut the book.
And some give thanks, and some blaspheme
    And most forget; but, either way,
That and the Child's unheeded dream
    Is all the light of all their day.

CORINNA GOES A-MAYING

GET up, get up for shame! The blooming morn
Upon her wings presents the god unshorn.

See how Aurora throws her fair

Fresh-quilted colors through the air:

Get up, sweet Slug-a-bed, and see

The dew bespangling herb and tree.

Each flower has wept, and bow'd toward the east,
Above an hour since; yet you not drest,

Nay! not so much as out of bed?

When all the birds have matins said,

And sung their thankful hymns: 't is sin,

Nay, profanation, to keep in,—

Whenas a thousand virgins on this day,

Spring, sooner than the lark, to fetch-in May.

Rise; and put on your foliage, and be seen
To come forth, like the Spring-time, fresh and green,
And sweet as Flora. Take no care
For jewels for your gown, or hair:
Fear not; the leaves will strew
Gems in abundance upon you:
Besides, the childhood of the day has kept,
Against you come, some orient pearls unwept:
Come, and receive them while the light
Hangs on the dew-locks of the night:
And Titan on the eastern hill
Retires himself, or else stands still
Till you come forth. Wash, dress, be brief in praying:
Come, my Corinna! come, let's go a-Maying.

THE splendor falls on castle walls
And snowy summits old in story;
The long light shakes across the lakes,
And the wild cataract leaps in glory.

Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O, hark, O, hear! how thin and clear,
And thinner, clearer, farther going!
O, sweet and far from cliff and scar
The horns of Elfland faintly blowing!

Blow, let us hear the purple glens replying,
Blow, bugle; answer, echoes, dying, dying, dying.

O love, they die in yon rich sky,
They faint on hill or field or river;
Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
And grow forever and forever.

Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,

O, THEN, I see Queen Mab hath been with you.
She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Over men's noses as they lie asleep;
Her wagon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;
Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film;
Her wagoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid.
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out o' mind the fairies' coachmakers,

ONCE more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace there 's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility:
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favor'd rage;
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide;
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height! On, on, you noblest English!
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game 's afoot!
Follow your spirit, and upon this charge
Cry, — “ God for Harry! England and Saint George!”

LIFE AS A PLAY

ALL the world 's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Jealous in honor, sudden, and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose; his manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

AMBITION

I DID not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let 's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Cromwell;
And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught thee;
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honor,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition!
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?
Love thyself last. Cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! . . .
Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, He would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

MORNING

SWEET is the breath of Morn, her rising sweet,
With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the Sun,
When first on this delightful land he spreads
His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower,
Glistering with dew; fragrant the fertile Earth
After soft showers; and sweet the coming-on

With this her solemn bird, and this fair Moon,
And these the gems of Heaven, her starry train:
But neither breath of Morn, when she ascends

AND in the frosty season, when the sun
Was set, and visible for many a mile
The cottage windows blazed through twilight gloom,
I heeded not their summons: happy time
It was indeed for all of us—for me
It was a time of rapture! Clear and loud
The village clock toll'd six, — I wheel'd about,
Proud and exulting like an untired horse
That cares not for his home. All shod with steel,
We hiss'd along the polish'd ice in games
Confederate, imitative of the chase.
So through the darkness and the cold we flew,
And not a voice was idle; with the din
Smitten, the precipices rang aloud;
The leafless trees and every icy crag
Tinkled like iron; while far distant hills
Into the tumult sent an alien sound
Of melancholy not unnoticed, while the stars
Eastward were sparkling clear, and in the west
The orange sky of evening died away.

Gleams that untravell'd world whose margin fades
For ever and for ever when I move.
How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnish'd, not to shine in use!
There lies the port; the vessel puffs her sail;
The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks;
The long day wanes; the slow moon climbs; the deep Moans round with many voices. Come, my friends,
'T is not too late to seek a newer world.
Push off, and sitting well in order smite
The sounding furrows; for my purpose holds
To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
Of all the western stars, until I die.

THE BEAUTY OF REALITY

THIS world's no blot for us
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.
— The beauty and the wonder and the power,
The shapes of things, their colors, lights and shades,
Changes, surprises, — and God made it all!
— For what? Do you feel thankful, ay, or no,
For this fair town's face, yonder river's line,
The mountain round it and the sky above,
Much more the figures of man, woman, child,
These are the frame to? What's it all about?
To be pass'd over, despised? or dwelt upon,
Wonder'd at? oh, this last of course! — you say.
But why not do as well as say, — paint these
Just as they are, careless what comes of it?
God's works — paint any one, and count it crime
To let a truth slip. Don't object, "His works
Are here already; nature is complete."
For, don't you mark? we're made so that we love

First when we see them painted, things we have pass'd
Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see;
And so they are better, painted — better to us,
Which is the same thing. Art was given for that;
God uses us to help each other so,
Lending our minds out.

SHIPS AT NIGHT

AND such a fate I could not choose but fear
For us sometimes; and sometimes when at night
Beneath the moon I watch'd the foam fly white
From off our bows, and thought how weak and small
Show'd the Rose-Garland's mast that look'd so tall
Beside the quays of Breman; when I saw
With measured steps the watch on toward me draw,
And in the moon the helmsman's peering face,
And 'twixt the cordage strain'd across my place
Beheld the white sail of the Fighting Man
Lead down the pathway of the moonlight wan —
Then when the ocean seem'd so measureless
The very sky itself might well be less,
When midst the changeless piping of the wind,
The intertwined slow waves press'd on behind
Roll'd o'er our wake and made it nought again,
Then would it seem an ill thing and a vain
To leave the hopeful world that we had known,
When all was o'er, hopeless to die alone
Within this changeless world of waters grey.

THE SWIMMER

LEANDER, being up, began to swim,
And looking back, saw Neptune follow him;
“O, let me visit Hero ere I die!”
The god put Helle’s bracelet on his arm,
And swore the sea should never do him harm.
He watch’d his arms, and, as they open’d wide
At every stroke, betwixt them would he slide,
And steal a kiss, and then run out and dance,
And, as he turn’d, cast many a gleeful glance,
And throw him gaudy toys to please his eye,
And dive into the water, and there pry
Upon his breast, his thighs, and every limb,
And up again, and close beside him swim,
And talk of love.

ON WRITING VERSE

'T is not enough no harshness gives offence,
The sound must seem an echo to the sense.
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;
But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent roar:
When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line too labors, and the words move slow.
Not so, when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er th' unbending corn, and skims along the main.
True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,
As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance:
True wit is nature to advantage dress'd;
What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express'd.

THE VILLAGE PREACHER

A MAN he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had changed, nor wish'd to change, his place;
Unpracticed he to fawn, or seek for power,
By doctrines fashion'd to the varying hour;
Far other aims his heart had learn'd to prize,
More skill'd to raise the wretched than to rise.
His house was known to all the vagrant train;
He chid their wanderings, but relieved their pain:
Thus to relieve the wretched was his pride,
And e'en his failings lean'd to Virtue's side;
But in his duty prompt at every call,
He watch'd and wept, he pray'd and felt for all;
And, as a bird each fond endearment tries
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,
He tried each art, reproved each dull delay,
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way.

His ready smile a parent's warmth express'd;
Their welfare pleased him, and their cares distress'd:
To them his heart, his love, his griefs were given,
But all his serious thoughts had rest in heaven.
As some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head.

WASTE PLACES BY THE SEA

I RODE one evening with Count Maddalo
Upon the bank of land which breaks the flow
Of Adria towards Venice: a bare strand
Of hillocks, heap'd from ever-shifting sand,
Matted with thistles and amphibious weeds,
Such as from earth's embrace the salt ooze breeds,
Is this; an uninhabited sea-side,
Which the lone fisher, when his nets are dried,
Abandons; and no other object breaks
The waste, but one dwarf tree and some few stakes
Broken and unrepair'd, and the tide makes
A narrow space of level sand thereon,
Where 't was our wont to ride while day went down.
This ride was my delight. I love all waste
And solitary places; where we taste
The pleasure of believing what we see
Is boundless, as we wish our souls to be:
And such was this wide ocean, and this shore
More barren than its billows; and yet more

Than all, with a remember'd friend I love
To ride as then I rode; — for the winds drove
The living spray along the sunny air
Into our faces; the blue heavens were bare,
Stripp'd to their depths by the awakening north;
And from the waves, sound like delight broke forth
Harmonizing with solitude, and sent

THE OFFICE OF BEAUTY

A THING of beauty is a joy forever:
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.
Therefore, on every morrow, are we wreathing
A flowery band to bind us to the earth,
Spite of despondence, of the inhuman dearth
Of noble natures, of the gloomy days,
Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darken'd ways
Made for our searching: yes, in spite of all,
Some shape of beauty moves away the pall
From our dark spirits. Such the sun, the moon,
Trees old and young, sprouting a shady boon
For simple sheep; and such are daffodils
With the green world they live in; and clear rills
That for themselves a cooling covert make
'Gainst the hot season; the mid forest brake,

Rich with a sprinkling of fair musk-rose blooms:
And such too is the grandeur of the dooms
We have imagined for the mighty dead;
All lovely tales that we have heard or read:
An endless fountain of immortal drink,
Pouring into us from the heaven's brink.

Blow trumpet, for the world is white with May!

Blow trumpet, the long night hath roll'd away!

Blow thro' the living world — “Let the King reign!”

Shall Rome or Heathen rule in Arthur's realm?

Flash brand and lance, fall battle-axe upon helm,
Fall battle-axe, and flash brand! Let the King reign!

Strike for the King and live! his knights have heard
That God hath told the King a secret word.

Fall battle-axe, and flash brand! Let the King reign!

Blow trumpet! he will lift us from the dust.

Blow trumpet! live the strength, and die the lust!

Clang battle-axe, and clash brand! Let the King reign!

Strike for the King and die! and if thou diest,

The King is king, and ever wills the highest.

O WILD West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,
Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,

Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou,
Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed

The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow

Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth, and fill (Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air)
With living hues and odors plain and hill:

TALKS IN THE POTTER'S HOUSE

As under cover of departing day
Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazán away,
Once more within the potter's house alone
I stood, surrounded by the shapes of clay.

Shapes of all sorts and sizes, great and small,
That stood along the floor and by the wall;
And some loquacious vessels were; and some
Listen'd perhaps, but never talk'd at all.

Said one among them — “Surely not in vain
My substance of the common earth was ta'en
And to this figure moulded, to be broke,
Or trampled back to shapeless earth again.”

Then said a second — “Ne'er a peevish boy
Would break the bowl from which he drank in joy:
And he that with his hand the vessel made
Will surely not in after wrath destroy.”

After a momentary silence spake
Some vessel of a more ungainly make;
“They sneer at me for leaning all awry;
What! did the hand then of the potter shake?”

Whereat some one of the loquacious lot —
I think a Súfi pipkin — waxing hot —
“All this of pot and potter — Tell me then,
Who is the potter, pray, and who the pot?”

Which now are dead, lodg'd in thy living bowers.

THE ELEGY

THE curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The plowman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillness holds,
Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,
And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds.

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's shade
Where heaves the turf in many a mouldering heap,
Each in his narrow cell forever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to lisp their sire's return,
Or climb his knees the envied kiss to share.

Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield,
Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke;
How jocund did they drive their team afield!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife
Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear:
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

Let not ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour:—
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

MELANCHOLY

IN the mid days of autumn, on their eves
The breath of Winter comes from far away,
And the sick west continually bereaves
Of some gold tinge, and plays a roundelay
Of death among the bushes and the leaves,
To make all bare before he dares to stray
From his north cavern. So sweet Isabel
By gradual decay from beauty fell.

And she forgot the stars, the moon, and sun,
And she forgot the blue above the trees,
And she forgot the dells where waters run,
And she forgot the chilly autumn breeze;
She had no knowledge when the day was done,
And the new morn she saw not: soon to peace
Among the dead, she'll wither, like a palm
Cut by an Indian for its juicy balm.

O RIVER of Yesterday, with current swift
Through chasms descending, and soon lost to sight,
I do not care to follow in their flight
The faded leaves, that on thy bosom drift!

O River of To-morrow, I uplift
Mine eyes, and thee I follow, as the night
Wanes into morning, and the dawning light
Broadens, and all the shadows fade and shift!

I follow, follow, where thy waters run
Through unfrequented, unfamiliar fields,
Fragrant with flowers and musical with song;
Still follow, follow; sure to meet the sun,

Lodg'd with me useless, though my soul more bent
To serve therewith my Maker, and present

Either man’s work, or his own gifts. Who best
Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best. His state

WITH ships the sea was sprinkled far and nigh,
Like stars in heaven, and joyously it show'd;
Some lying fast at anchor in the road,
Some veering up and down, one knew not why.
A goodly vessel did I then espy
Come like a giant from a haven broad;
And lustily along the bay she strode,
Her tackling rich, and of apparel high.
This ship was nought to me, nor I to her,
Yet I pursued her with a lover's look;
This ship to all the rest did I prefer:
When will she turn, and whither? She will brook
No tarrying; where she comes the winds must stir;
On went she, and due north her journey took.

THE world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers:
Little we see in Nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
This sea that bares her bosom to the moon;

And are up-gather'd now like sleeping flowers;
For this, for everything, we are out of tune;
It moves us not. — Great God! I'd rather be

Stand in the desert. Near them, on the sand,

Half sunk, a shatter'd visage lies, whose frown,

Tell that its sculptor well those passions read

Which yet survive, stamp'd on these lifeless things,

THE OCEAN

THERE is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
    There is society where none intrudes,
By the deep sea, and music in its roar:
I love not Man the less, but Nature more,
From these our interviews, in which I steal
    From all I may be or have been before,
To mingle with the Universe, and feel
What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

Roll on, thou deep and dark blue Ocean, roll!
Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in vain;
    Man marks the earth with ruin, his control
Stops with the shore; upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain
A shadow of man's ravage, save his own,
    When, for a moment, like a drop of rain,
He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan,
Without a grave, unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

And I have loved thee, Ocean ! and my joy
Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward. From a boy
I wanton'd with thy breakers — they to me
Were a delight; and if the freshening sea
Made them a terror — 't was a pleasing fear,
For I was as it were a child of thee,
And trusted to thy billows far and near,
And laid my hand upon thy mane — as I do here.

"COURAGE!" he said, and pointed toward the land,

In the afternoon they came unto a land
In which it seemed always afternoon.
All round the coast the languid air did swoon,
Breathing like one that hath a weary dream.
Full-faced above the valley stood the moon;
And, like a downward smoke, the slender stream
Along the cliff to fall and pause and fall did seem.

There is sweet music here that softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass,
Or night-dews on still waters between walls
Of shadowy granite, in a gleaming pass;
Music that gentlier on the spirit lies,
Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes;
Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.
Here are cool mosses deep,
And thro' the moss the ivies creep,
And in the stream the long-leaved flowers weep,
And from the craggy ledge the poppy hangs in sleep.

LOOKING BACKWARD

THERE 's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,
When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;
'T is not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades
so fast,

But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

Oh could I feel as I have felt, — or be what I have been,
Or weep as I could once have wept, o'er many a vanish'd scene;
As springs in deserts found seem sweet, all brackish though they be,

So midst the wither'd waste of life, those tears would flow to me.

A MOOD

A BLIGHT, a gloom, I know not what, has crept upon my gladness,

Some vague, remote ancestral touch of sorrow or of madness;
A fear that is not fear, a pain that has not pain's insistence;
A sense of longing, or of loss, in some foregone existence;
A subtle hurt that never pen has writ nor tongue has spoken.
Such hurt perchance as Nature feels when a blossom'd bough is broken.

RECOLLECTIONS OF CHILDHOOD

THERE was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,
The earth, and every common sight,
To me did seem

Apparell'd in celestial light,
The glory and the freshness of a dream.
It is not now as it hath been of yore; —
Turn wheresoe'er I may,
By night or day,
The things which I have seen I now can see no more.

The Rainbow comes and goes,
And lovely is the Rose, —
The Moon doth with delight
Look round her when the heavens are bare;
Waters on a starry night
Are beautiful and fair;
The sunshine is a glorious birth;
But yet I know, where'er I go,
That there hath past away a glory from the earth.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar:
    Not in entire forgetfulness,
    And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home.

Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
    Upon the growing Boy,
But he beholds the light, and whence it flows,
    He sees it in his joy;
The Youth, who daily farther from the east
Must travel, still is Nature's Priest,
    And by the vision splendid
    Is on his way attended;
At length the Man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.

THE OAK

LIVE thy Life,

Like yon oak,

Living gold;

Summer-rich
Then; and then
Autumn-changed,
Soberer-hued
Gold again.

THINGS LOVED

I LOVE all that thou lovest,
    Spirit of delight!
The fresh Earth in new leaves dress'd,
    And the starry night;
Autumn evening, and the morn
    When the golden mists are born.

I love snow, and all the forms
    Of the radiant frost;
I love waves, and winds, and storms,
    Everything almost
Which is Nature's, and may be
    Untainted by man's misery.

I love Love — though he has wings,
    And like light can flee,
But above all other things,
    Spirit, I love thee —
Thou art love and life! Oh come,
    Make once more my heart thy home.

Then a denser, bluer vapor,
Then a snow-white cloud unfolding,

FIRST the Primrose courts his eyes;

As half-fearing to be seen
Prettily her leaves between Peeps the Violet, pale to see
That her virtues slighted be;
Which so much his liking wins
That to seize her he begins.
Yet before he stoop'd so low
He his wanton eye did throw
On a stem that grew more high,
And the Rose did there espy.
Who, beside her precious scent,
To procure his eyes content
Did display her goodly breast,
Where he found at full express'd

All the good that Nature showers
On a thousand other flowers;
Wherewith he affected takes it,
His beloved flower he makes it,
And without desire of more
Walks through all he saw before.

THE CHIMES

In the ancient town of Bruges,
In the quaint old Flemish city,
As the evening shades descended,
Low and loud and sweetly blended,
Low at times and loud at times,
And changing like a poet's rhymes,
Rang the beautiful wild chimes
From the Belfry in the market
Of the ancient town of Bruges.

Oft amid my broken slumbers
Still I hear those magic numbers,
As they loud proclaim'd the flight
And stolen marches of the night;
Till their chimes in sweet collision
Mingle with each wandering vision,
Mingle with the fortune-telling
Gipsy-bands of dreams and fancies,
Which amid the waste expanses
Of the silent land of trances
Have their solitary dwelling.

THE RAVEN

ONCE upon a midnight dreary, while I ponder'd, weak and weary,

Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore,—
While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.
“ ‘T is some visitor,” I mutter'd, “tapping at my chamber door:

Only this and nothing more.”

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December,

And each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor;

But the silence was unbroken, and the stillness gave no token.

“ Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery explore,
Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery explore;
“ T is the wind and nothing more.”

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a flirt and flutter,

In there stepp'd a stately Raven of the saintly days of yore,
Not the least obeisance made he; not an instant stopp'd or stay'd he;

But, with mien of lord or lady, perch'd above my chamber door,

Perch'd upon a bust of Pallas just above my chamber door:
Perch'd, and sat, and nothing more.

THE PROMISE OF THE SKIES

MANY a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,
Did I look on great Orion sloping slowly to the west.

Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro' the mellow shade,
Glitter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.

Here about the beach I wander'd, nourishing a youth sublime
With the fairy tales of science, and the long result of time;

When the centuries behind me like a fruitful land reposed;
When I clung to all the present for the promise that it closed;

When I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;

Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;

Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew

From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south-wind rushing warm,

With the standards of the people plunging thro' the thunder storm;

Till the war-drum throb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were furl'd

In the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world.

Yet I doubt not thro' the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widen'd with the process of the suns.

All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

Ghost-like I paced round the haunts of my childhood,
Earth seem'd a desert I was bound to traverse,
Seeking to find the old familiar faces.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why wert not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces,

How some they have died, and some they have left me,
And some are taken from me; all are departed;

When the lute is broken,
Sweet tones are remember'd not;

From my wings are shaken the dews that waken
    The sweet buds every one,
When rock'd to rest on their mother's breast,
    As she dances about the sun.
I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
    And whiten the green plains under,
And then again I dissolve it in rain,
    And laugh as I pass in thunder.

I sift the snow on the mountains below,
And their great pines groan aghast;
And all the night 't is my pillow white,
While I sleep in the arms of the blast.
Sublime on the towers of my skyey bowers
Lightning my pilot sits,
In a cavern under is fetter'd the thunder,
It struggles and howls at fits.

I AM monarch of all I survey,
    My right there is none to dispute,
From the centre all round to the sea,
    I am lord of the fowl and the brute.
O solitude! where are the charms
    That sages have seen in thy face?
Better dwell in the midst of alarms,
    Than reign in this horrible place.

Religion! what treasure untold
    Lies hid in that heavenly word!
More precious than silver or gold,
    Or all that this earth can afford.
But the sound of the church-going bell,
    These valleys and rocks never heard,
Never sigh'd at the sound of a knell,
    Or smiled when a sabbath appear'd.

Ye winds that have made me your sport,
Convey to this desolate shore
Some cordial endearing report
    Of a land I shall visit no more!
My friends, do they now and then send
    A wish or a thought after me?
O tell me I yet have a friend,

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corpse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

We buried him darkly at dead of night,
The sods with our bayonets turning;
By the struggling moonbeam's misty light
And the lantern dimly burning.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow.

But half of our heavy task was done
When the clock struck the hour for retiring:
And we heard the distant and random gun
That the foe was sullenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone,
But we left him alone with his glory.

THE poplars are fell'd; farewell to the shade
And the whispering sound of the cool colonnade!
The winds play no longer and sing in the leaves,

Twelve years have elapsed since I first took a view
Of my favorite field, and the bank where they grew:
And now in the grass behold they are laid,
And the tree is my seat that once lent me a shade!

The blackbird has fled to another retreat,
Where the hazels afford him a screen from the heat;
And the scene where his melody charm'd me before
Resounds with his sweet-flowing ditty no more.

The change both my heart and my fancy employs;

Have a still shorter date, and die sooner than we.

DAVID GOES TO CURE THE KING

THEN I, as was meet,
Knelt down to the God of my fathers, and rose on my feet,
And ran o'er the sand burnt to powder. The tent was unloop'd;
I pull'd up the spear that obstructed, and under I stoop'd;
Hands and knees on the slippery grass-patch, all wither'd and gone,
That extends to the second enclosure, I groped my way on Till I felt where the foldskirts fly open. Then once more I pray'd,
And open'd the foldskirts and enter'd, and was not afraid
But spoke, "Here is David, thy servant!" And no voice replied.
At the first I saw nought but the blackness: but soon I descried
A something more black than the blackness — the vast, the upright
Main prop which sustains the pavilion: and slow into sight
Grew a figure against it, gigantic and blackest of all.
Then a sunbeam, that burst through the tent-roof, show'd Saul.

You must wake and call me early, call me early, mother dear;

And the wild marsh-marigold shines like fire in swamps and hollows gray,
And I 'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I 'm to be Queen o'

The night-winds come and go, mother, upon the meadow-grass,
And the happy stars above them seem to brighten as they pass;
There will not be a drop of rain the whole of the livelong day,
And I 'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I 'm to be Queen o'
the May.

All the valley, mother, 'ill be fresh and green and still,
And the cowslip and the crowfoot are over all the hill,
And the rivulet in the flowery dale 'ill merrily glance and play,
For I 'm to be Queen o' the May, mother, I 'm to be Queen o'

AND the sea lends large, as the marsh: lo, out of his plenty the sea

Pours fast: full soon the time of the flood-tide must be:

Look how the grace of the sea doth go

About and about through the intricate channels that flow

Here and there,

Everywhere,

Till his waters have flooded the uttermost creeks and the low-lying lanes,

And the marsh is mesh'd with a million veins,

That like as with rosy and silvery essences flow

In the rose-and-silver evening glow.

Farewell, my lord Sun!

The creeks overflow: a thousand rivulets run

'Twixt the roots of the sod; the blades of the marsh-grass stir;

Passeth a hurrying sound of wings that westward whirr;

Passeth, and all is still; and the currents cease to run;

And the sea and the marsh are one.

How still the plains of the water be!

Rescue my castle before the hot day
Brightens to blue from its silvery gray.

CHORUS.— Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!

Ride past the suburbs, asleep as you 'd say;
Many 's the friend there, will listen and pray,
“God's luck to gallants that strike up the lay —
CHORUS.—“Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!”

Forty miles off, like a roebuck at bay,
Flouts Castle Brancepeth the Roundheads' array:
Who laughs, “Good fellows ere this, by my fay,

CHORUS.—“Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!”

Who? My wife Gertrude; that, honest and gay,
Laughs when you talk of surrendering, “Nay!
“I 've better counsellors; what counsel they?

THE BLACKSMITH

SWIFTLY they hurried away to the forge of Basil the blacksmith.
There at the door they stood, with wondering eyes to behold him

Take in his leathern lap the hoof of the horse as a plaything, Nailing the shoe in its place; while near him the tire of the cart-wheel

Lay like a fiery snake, coil'd round in a circle of cinders.
Oft on autumnal eves, when without in the gathering darkness
Bursting with light seem'd the smithy, through every cranny and crevice,

Warm by the forge within they watch'd the laboring bellows,
And as its panting ceased, and the sparks expired in the ashes,
Merrily laugh'd, and said they were nuns going into the chapel.

THE TIDE

As at return of tide the total weight of ocean,
Drawn by moon and sun from Labrador and Greenland,
Sets-in amain, in the open space betwixt Mull and Scarba,
Heaving, swelling, spreading the might of the mighty Atlantic;
There into cranny and slit of the rocky, cavernous bottom
Settles down, and with dimples huge the smooth sea-surface
Eddies, coils, and whirls; by dangerous Corryvreckan:
So in my soul of souls, through its cells and secret recesses,
Comes back, swelling and spreading, the old democratic fervor.

VASTNESS

MANY a hearth upon our dark globe sighs after many a vanish'd face,

Many a planet by many a sun may roll with the dust of a vanish'd race.

Fame blowing out from her golden trumpet a jubilant challenge to Time and to Fate;

Slander, her shadow, sowing the nettle on all the laurell'd graves of the great;

National hatreds of whole generations, and pigmy spites of the village spire;

Vows that will last to the last death-ruckle, and vows that are snapt in a moment of fire;

Stately purposes, valor in battle, glorious annals of army and fleet,

Death for the right cause, death for the wrong cause, trumpets
of victory, groans of defeat;

Raving politics, never at rest — as this poor earth's pale history runs, —

What is it all but a trouble of ants in the gleam of a million million of suns?

What but a murmur of gnats in the gloom, or a moment's anger of bees in their hive?

Peace, let it be! for I loved him, and love him for ever: the dead are not dead but alive.

NATURE

THESE beauteous forms,

Through a long absence, have not been to me
As a landscape to a blind man's eye:
But oft, in lonely rooms, and 'mid the din
Of towns and cities, I have owed to them,
In hours of weariness, sensations sweet,
Felt in the blood, and felt along the heart;
And passing even into my purer mind,
With tranquil restoration: — feelings too
Of unremember'd pleasure: such, perhaps,
As have no slight or trivial influence
On that best portion of a good man's life,
His little, nameless, unremember'd, acts
Of kindness and of love. Nor less, I trust,
To them I may have owed another gift,
Of aspect more sublime; that blessed mood,
In which the burthen of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world,

Is lighten'd: — that serene and blessed mood,
In which the affections gently lead us on, —
Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
And even the motion of our human blood
Almost suspended, we are laid asleep
In body, and become a living soul:
While with an eye made quiet by the power
Of harmony, and the deep power of joy,
We see into the life of things.

LOVE

O LYRIC Love, half angel and half bird
And all a wonder and a wild desire,—
Boldest of hearts that ever braved the sun,
And sang a kindred soul out to his face,—
Hail thou, and harken from the realms of help!

Never may I commence my song, my due
To God who best taught song by gift of thee,
Except with bent head and beseeching hand —
That still, despite the distance and the dark,
What was, again may be; some interchange
Of grace, some splendor once thy very thought,
Some benediction anciently thy smile:
— Never conclude, but raising hand and head
Thither where eyes, that cannot reach, yet yearn
For all hope, all sustainment, all reward,
Their utmost up and on, — so blessing back
In those thy realms of help, that heaven thy home,
Some whiteness which, I judge, thy face makes proud,
Some wanness where, I think, thy foot may fall!

THE HERO

YEA, let all good things await
Him who cares not to be great
But as he saves or serves the state.
Not once or twice in our rough island-story
The path of duty was the way to glory.
He that walks it, only thirsting
For the right, and learns to deaden
    Love of self, before his journey closes,
He shall find the stubborn thistle bursting
    Into glossy purples, which outredden
    All voluptuous garden-roses.
Not once or twice in our fair island-story
The path of duty was the way to glory.
He, that ever following her commands,
On with toil of heart and knees and hands,
Thro' the long gorge to the far light has won
    His path upward, and prevail'd,
    Shall find the toppling crags of Duty scaled
Are close upon the shining table-lands

To which our God Himself is moon and sun.
Such was he: his work is done.
Speak no more of his renown.
Lay your earthly fancies down,
And in the vast cathedral leave him.
God accept him, Christ receive him!

THE STATE

THOU, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!

    Humanity with all its fears,
    With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what Master laid thy keel,
What Workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
    Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
    Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'T is of the wave and not the rock;
'T is but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,

Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea !
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, — are all with thee!

GOD

OUR God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come;
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home:—

Under the shadow of thy throne
The saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received her frame,
From everlasting thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages, in thy sight,
Are like an evening gone;
Short as the watch that ends the night,
Before the rising sun.

Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
    Bears all its sons away;
They fly, forgotten, as a dream
    Dies at the opening day.

Our God, our help in ages past,
    Our hope for years to come,
Be thou our guard while troubles last,
    And our eternal home.

Psalm XC, 1-5, First Part
(Man Frail and God Eternal)

[Iambics three, four]

And therefore, I said, Glaucon, that training in poetry is a more potent instrument than any other, because rhythm and harmony find their way into the inward places of the soul, on which they mightily fasten, imparting grace, and making the soul of him who is rightly educated graceful, or of him who is ill-educated ungraceful; and also because he who has received this true education of the inner being will most shrewdly perceive omissions or faults in art and nature, and with a true taste, while he praises and rejoices over and receives into his soul the good, and becomes noble and good, he will justly blame and hate the bad, now in the days of his youth, even before he is able to know the reason why; and when reason comes he will recognize and salute the friend with whom his education has made him long familiar.

Plato, Republic, III, 402.

NOTES AND INDEXES

NOTES

THE symbol ' denotes an accented syllable, the symbol + an unaccented one, and the symbol ( ) an omitted portion of a foot. Verses ending with an incomplete foot are called catalectic. If a portion of a foot is omitted at the beginning of the verse, the verse is said to be truncated. An extra unaccented syllable in the foot at the end of the line does not change the foot but makes a double ending of the line. An extra unaccented syllable in the foot at the beginning of a line makes what is called anacrusis without changing the character of the verse. An exceptional foot may be substituted for the typical foot, and the verse become irregular and sometimes decidedly irregular as these substitutions are more or less frequent. But any verse while retaining on the whole its peculiar rhythm may begin with an accented syllable and the same is true of a verse-section after a pause. Sometimes a two syllable foot with equally accented syllables is found in verse. Such a foot is a spondee. The symbol // denotes a rhythmic pause in the line and such a pause is called a cæsura. In a rhythmic pause, no syllable is dropped, but in a compensating pause, a portion of a foot is omitted and this omission is indicated by the symbol ( ).

A verse is named by its prevailing foot, — iambic, trochaic, anapaestic, dactylic.

By iambic is meant	+ '
By trochaic is meant	' +
By anapaestic is meant	+ + '
By dactylic is meant	' + +

As the terms are here used, foot iambic means verse is regular. Prevailing foot iambic means verse is irregular. Mixed prevailing foot iambic means verse is decidedly irregular. Trochaic, anapaestic, and dactylic verse are also similarly divided and classified.

FIRST LINES

A blight, a gloom, I know not what, has crept upon my gladness,	93
A man he was to all the country dear,	63
A thing of beauty is a joy forever:	67
All the world 's a stage,	50
An idle poet, here and there,	43
And in the frosty season, when the sun	55
And such a fate I could not choose but fear	60
And the sea lends large, as the marsh: lo, out of his plenty the sea	130
And the smoke rose slowly, slowly,	101
Around, around, flew each sweet sound,	24
Art thou pale for weariness	46
As at return of tide the total weight of ocean,	141
As one	3
As under cover of departing day	71
 Blow trumpet, for the world is white with May!	69
Boot, saddle, to horse, and away!	139
But who the melodies of morn can tell?	85
 "Courage!" he said, and pointed toward the land,	88
First the Primrose courts his eyes;	102
For take thy balance, if thou be so wise,	84
 Get up, get up for shame! The blooming morn	44
Happy the man whose wish and care	9
He roved among the vales and streams,	39
He shall give His angels charge	106
Hear the sledges with the bells,	113
Hither thou com'st. The busy wind all night	16
 I am monarch of all I survey,	121
I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,	119
I cannot rest from travel;	57

I come from haunts of coot and hern,	20
I did not think to shed a tear	52
I have had playmates, I have had companions,	112
I love all that thou lovest,	100
I met a traveller from an antique land	83
I remember, I remember	26
I rode one evening with Count Maddalo	65
I walk unseen	32
In the ancient town of Bruges,	107
In the mid days of autumn, on their eves	76
It is not growing like a tree	28
Leander, being up, began to swim,	61
Life! I know not what thou art,	15
Little thinks, in the field, yon red-cloak'd clown	42
Live thy Life,	99
Many a hearth upon our dark globe sighs after many a vanish'd face,	145
Many a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,	110
Moor, moor the barge, ye gallant crew!	36
My heart leaps up when I behold	14
Mysterious Night! when our first parent knew	81
Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,	123
Now air is hush'd, save where the weak-eyed bat	30
O lyric Love, half angel and half bird	149
O River of Yesterday, with current swift	77
O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been with you.	48
O Wedding-Guest! this soul hath been	22
O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,	70
Once more the Heavenly Power	4
Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;	49
Once upon a midnight dreary, while I ponder'd, weak and weary,	108
Our God, our help in ages past,	154
Shut in from all the world without,	33
Sleep on!	56
Song is no bauble	vii

183

Spring, the sweet Spring, is the year's pleasant king;	125
Stars are of mighty use: the night	7
Such a starved bank of moss	135
Sunset and evening star,	13
Sure thou didst flourish once! and many springs,	73
Sweet and low, sweet and low,	138
Sweet is the breath of Morn, her rising sweet,	54
Swiftly they hurried away to the forge of Basil the blacksmith.	140
Teach me, my God and King,	18
The cock is crowing,	6
The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,	74
The gray sea and the long black land;	41
The poplars are fell'd; farewell to the shade	126
The sea is calm to-night.	29
The splendor falls on castle walls	47
The wind flapp'd loose, the wind was still,	34
The world is too much with us; late and soon,	80
The year 's at the spring	117
Then from her burnish'd gate the goodly glitt'ring East	89
Then I, as was meet,	127
Then, in such hour of need	136
There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,	86
There 's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,	92
There was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,	94
These beauteous forms,	147
They spent all night in open field; fires round about them shined.	91
This is the spray the Bird clung to,	137
This world 's no blot for us	58
Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!	152
Three years she grew in sun and shower,	25
Tiger! Tiger! burning bright	105
'T is not enough no harshness gives offence,	62
To the ocean now I fly,	104
To-night the winds begin to rise	35
Wee, sleekit, cow'rin', tim'rous beastie,	11
When I consider how my light is spent	78

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,	82
When the lamp is shatter'd,	118
Whence is it, that the floweret of the field doth fade,	17
Why do you look at me, Annie? You think I am hard and cold;	90
With ships the sea was sprinkled far and nigh,	79
Yea, let all good things await	150
You meaner beauties of the night	38
You must wake and call me early, call me early, mother dear;	128
